TWO 'BIG SHOTS' IN PHILA. NUMBERS RACKET CAUGHT

Thomas Fahey and Thomas
Rock Seized In Times
Square, New York

SENT TO PHILADELPHIA

Had Been Hiding Since Sought On Lottery Operations Charge

PHILADELPHIA, June 26—(INS)—
Captured on the side walks of New York, two "big shots" of the Philadelphia numbers racket were returned to this city today. The prisoners, Thomas Fahey and Thomas Rock, were seized
in the Times Square district in Manhattan by two Philadelphia detectives
who acted on an anonymous tip.

The capture was effected near a hotel where the two men were staying. They had been hiding since this city sought to effect their arrest on indictments charging lottery operations.

Taken to police headquarters in New York the two prisoners waived extradition and were returned to this city early this morning.

They face arraignment today.

A. S. Walker, Langhorne, Weds A Philadelphia Miss

LANGHORNE, June 26—A Langhorne man, Arthur S. Walker, took as his bride on Saturday, Miss Marian Lloyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Lloyd, Philadelphia, at St.
Paul's Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia. The ceremony, occurring at four
p. m., was officiating over by the Rev.
Burlingh Cruikshank, pastor of the church.

The father of the bride gave her in marriage. The former Miss Lloyd was attired in a gown of white mousseline
de soie, and wore a lace cap and veil.
Her flowers were lilies-of-the-valley,
smoke and orchids.

The maids-of-honor were Miss Mary Elizabeth Lewis, Duncannon, and Miss Wave Murray, Philadelphia. The former wore white mousseline de soie
over apricot; and the latter a dress of white mousseline over blue. Talisman roses and blue delphinium were carried by the two. The bridesmaids were: Miss Anne Haland Collins, Merchantville, N. J.; Miss Dorothy
Slack, Atlantic City, N. J.; Miss Ruth
Sacre, and Miss Eleanor Lithgow, Philadelphia. All of these attendants were garbed in peace-toned mousseline
de soie, and had bouquets of talisman roses and blue delphinium. The bridesmaids and maids-of-honor wore leghorn hats trimmed with blue African daisies.

Charles Seaton Coates, Langhorne,
served as best man; and the ushers
were: Thomas E. Coe, Jr., Donald K.
Oakley, A. Paul Townsend and Horace Townsend, Langhorne.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents, 5326 Locust street,
Philadelphia, followed the ceremony.
Mr. and Mrs. Walker will reside on Station avenue, here, being at home after July 1st.

John A. Ehrlen Dies In Arizona; Ill 5 Years

LANGHORNE, June 26—The body of a veteran of the World War, John A.
Ehrlen, who died in Prescott, Arizona,
Friday, will be received at his home here tomorrow.

The young man, aged 35, joined the United States Army during the period of the World War, and spent several months in camps in this country. He became ill a few years ago, and had spent the past five years in Arizona in an effort to regain his health. His condition had gradually grown worse
until the time of his death last Friday.

The late Mr. Ehrlen was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Ehrlen. In addition to his parents, he is survived by his wife and daughter; one brother, Byron Ehrlen; and two sisters, the Misses Arabella and Ruth Ehrlen.

The deceased was affiliated with the Jesse W. Soby Post, 148, American Legion.

A native of Philadelphia, Mr. Ehrlen
had resided in this borough for 20 years.

Funeral arrangements have not been made as yet.

SON FOR THE TUNNEYS

New York City, June 26—Mrs. Gene Tunney, wife of the former heavyweight boxing champion, gave birth to her second boy at the Presbyterian Hospital here today. The event took place at 7.44 a. m. Tunney, who was on hand at the hospital throughout the night, greeted his new son a short while after the delivery. Mrs.
Tunney is the former Polly Lauder,
Connecticut heiress. The baby weighed 8 lbs. 11 ounces at birth. Mother and child were reported "doing well."

Fourth Birthdays of Two Tots Are Celebrated Here

The fourth birthday anniversaries of Betty Gillies and Richard Riedel, East Circle, were celebrated Saturday
afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs.
William Gillies, 228 East Circle.

A merry afternoon of enjoyment was had by the children—Ruth and William Vandegrift, Regina, Richard and Robert Riedel, Anne and J. Boyer, Marcella and Jack Gillies, Shirley and Angus Gillies, Jr., and Blanche and Betty Gillies.

The adults were: Mrs. Joseph Boyer, Mrs. Russell Vandegrift, Mrs.
Angus Gillies, Mrs. Carl Riedel, Mrs.
John Gillies and Mrs. William Gillies.

HOGVARD IN HOSPITAL FOR THREE MONTHS

Former Edgely Resident Was Seriously Injured In Recent Accident

PLANE FELL INTO PIECES

Physicians express the belief that Paul Hogvard, who was injured several days ago when he was forced to
"bail out" of the airplane he was testing in New York state, will be confined to a hospital near Buffalo, N. Y., for about three months. Hogvard was injured when hit by falling pieces of the craft as he left the machine from a height of over two miles.

Hogvard, who suffered a broken arm and injury to his hip, will need a longer recuperative period than at first thought, it is stated.

The injuries to the former Edgely resident occurred as he was testing a U. S. Navy observation plane over the village of Depew. Hogvard, 31, who is now a resident of Philadelphia, is engaged as test pilot for the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Company, Inc.
When the motor of the ship fell out at a height of 1200 feet Hogvard clambered from the spinning plane and jumped, floating to earth by parachute. He lay in the field for over an hour after being given first aid by Dr.
Joseph G. Fernbach, Lancaster, as arrival of an ambulance was awaited.
Two ambulances had difficulty in locating the spot.

Details of the crash which have just been learned here, are to the effect that the body of the plane fell in a basball park almost in the center of Depew. The field is completely surrounded by houses. Hogvard had been putting the plane through a severe test for an hour before the mishap.
Suddenly the motor parted from the ship and something went wrong with the tail, the flier said. Hogvard prepared to "bail out," and suffered his injuries a climbing from the craft, as falling pieces hit him.

"It was a nice, easy parachute trip down," he told. "I didn't get hurt in landing."

The largest part of the motor fell on the New York Central railroad tracks near the Depew depot, and portions of the propeller fell into a creek.
Officials of the Curtiss company requested that all parts found be returned, in order that study may be made to determine the cause of the plane falling apart.

One witness to the crash said: "I had heard a plane for quite a while,
when suddenly the usual noise changed, and I heard a loud whistling sound. I got out of my car and looked up. A section of the plane seemed to have torn loose and it fell. I saw

DID NOT STEAL WATCH

Palmer Denny, Pond street, yesterday paid his fine of $10 and costs for being intoxicated and not for stealing a watch, chain and penknife as previously stated. Denny claimed that the watch and other articles were given to him by H. Singley, 403 Jefferson avenue, and that they were not stolen by him. No evidence was offered to prove that Denny had stolen the articles in question, which were found upon his person.

VISITING IN NEW YORK

Mrs. E. L. Fellows, 256 Radcliffe
street, is spending a week in New York City as the guest of friends.

STARTING OUT YOUNG

(By "The Stroller")
A seven year old colored lad
yesterday staged a hold-up here
and took $0 cents from a white
boy, enroute home from the store
where he had gone to make a purchase for his mother.

The parent gave her eleven-year old son $1 for the purchase at the store. The amount of the purchase was 20 cents and when the lad
started back home with the $0
cents change, the other youngster, 7 years of age, started a fight with the older lad, and then took the money away from him, and left.

Police were notified and given a description of the lad. He was later arrested by Chief Jones, who found him chasing a drill engine.
The youth was identified but the money was gone. He had not been home all day and it is presumed that he took the $0 cents and stayed a party all by himself. He is a ward in the home of a colored family here.

BUSINESS MEN IN GREAT BRITAIN FORGET THERE WAS A DEPRESSION, SAYS KNICKERBOCKER; EMPIRE IS NEARLY BACK TO THE 1929 LEVEL

That She Is Leading World in Race for Recovery of Real Prosperity is Conclusion After Examination of Her Economic Body, From Stock Exchange to Coal Mines

(Note: Business men in Great Britain have forgotten there was a depression, H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service foreign correspondent, writes in the concluding article of his series on British recovery. Great Britain, he says, is really coming back and has but a short distance to go before achieving the 1929 level.)

By H. R. Knickerbocker

Service. Reproduction in whole or part forbidden.)

LONDON, June 26—(INS)—Britain
is really coming back, and she is leading the world in the race for recovery of real prosperity. This is the conclusion after an examination of her economic body from the stock exchange
to coal mines and from the slums of Whitechapel to the clubs of Mayfair.

She has not yet achieved full prosperity. She has a good many steps to go before she recovers the prosperity that was hers before the war. These are the steps that are causing her worry, because some say she will never get back to pre-war prosperity.
But compared to the troubles of other countries, Britain's today are nothing.

No other country in the world can parallel the record approach of Britain toward the pre-crisis level of economic well-being. America has climbed faster perhaps from the depth of her unparalleled depression but America has made further to go.

Britain's tariff helped her recovery.
Depreciation of the pound helped it.
Aside from these measures the ordinary forces of capitalist economy have done the job.

Britain's record is not 100 per cent
favorable, but the credits so far outbalance the debits that her profit is fatter than any other country's.

"Recovery," declared a skeptical,
critical, but realistic member of one of the most authoritative economic organizations in this country, "has reached such a point in Britain that businessmen appear to have forgotten
there was a depression. There is no longer any fear of the soundness of the British economic constitution. That uneasiness which affected everyone,
that uncertainty about the ground under your feet is gone."

Confidence has returned. The basis of enterprise has been re-established.
Two years ago the most courageous businessmen took the lead and by now
conditions have been established
which give courage to the timidest.

These conditions are first, the remarkable fact that the number of people at work in industry today is about 33,000 of the number at work in 1929,
the greatest number in Britain's history. She had 10,220,000 at work in 1929 and in May, 1934, had 10,187,000
at work.

Second, the equally remarkable fact that Britain is doing today virtually as much business as she did in 1929. The comprehensive index of business activity of the economist based on employment, imports, exports, shipping,
rail traffic, postal receipts, building
activity, consumption of cotton, coal
and electricity, bank clearings and automobile registration shows British business at 100 in 1924, reached 110 in 1929, fell to 93 in 1931 and has today
climbed back to 109.

Britain has balanced her budget, reduced her income tax and restored the ten per cent cuts in the dole. Her wealthy have to pay less, and her poor receive more. At the same time the unemployment insurance fund has for the first time made a payment to the government on its debt for money borrowed to pay the dole. Decreased unemployment permitted a payment of $20,000,000 and it is estimated that if all goes well the debt will be cleared

in thirty-five years!

Her government saved $200,000,000 a year by converting the war loan. She kept her currency stable after its initial dive from gold, at a level most profitable for herself. Her businessmen serenely insist that gold has gone
off the pound, and continue to operate in the confident belief that a pound
will be the same pound next year as it is today.

The bank of England's cheap money policy has given industry capital at a lower rate than for two generations
past. Industry is using it. Investment is increasing.

Stock values have steadily appreciated since 1932 with no significant setbacks and the market looks forward to still higher levels.

Industrial profits have increased rapidly since the end of 1932 and are increasing this year at a still greater rate. It is once more profitable to produce.

The greatest building program in the history of England has already led to the erection of 140,000 houses in the last six months. This is an all time record for Britain.

While world trade is sinking, British foreign trade has maintained its level.

Finally, agricultural England is making motions towards getting on its feet. It is too early to report upon the complicated system of tariffs, quotas,
marketing boards and other schemes
the government has introduced to help
the farmer, few agree on their efficacy.
In many cases agriculture, far from the American case, plays a comparatively small role. Of the 19,000,000 people of all classes at work in the entire country only 1,500,000 are engaged in farming.

These are the chief credits on Britain's recovery ledger.

She has three major debits.
First, she still has 2,090,000 registered unemployed, and although this figure is constantly falling, and is lower than at any time since 1930, it is still 700,000 higher than in 1929 and 16.2 per cent of insured workers in all industries are still jobless.

Furthermore, her unemployment
has never since the war fallen below 1,000,000. This least happy fact correlates with the second major debit.

The second debit is that Britain normally has to export and sell abroad
thirty per cent of her products, (compared to America's eight per cent),
and her exports although up 9 per cent this spring compared to 1933, are still down 50 per cent compared to 1934, and thirty per cent compared to 1912. The loss since 1913 is around one billion dollars a year.

Third and last debit is the fact that there seems to be an automatic limit to the present movement upward. It has taken place behind the new tariff wall. The initial impetus to recovery was the effort of British manufacturers to replace the goods shut out of England by the tariff.

When this process has been com-

KEYSTONE STATE RANKS SECOND IN PRODUCTION

High Standing Despite Being Smaller State From
Standpoint of Area

PRODUCTS, $4,105,387,000

HARRISBURG, June 26—(INS)—
Its achievements in industry acknowledged throughout the world, Pennsylvania today ranks second in the United States in industrial production and the number of workers employed although
one of the smaller states from the
stand-point of area.

The Keystone State, occupying 1.49
per cent of the entire area of the union, turned out products valued at $4,105,387,000 in 1931, leading 46 states
and being exceeded only by New York
which realized $6,554,250,000 that year,
according to the Department of Internal Affairs' latest available figures.

Boom times preceding the stock market crash were reflected in the production valuations reached during this period. In 1927, the state's manufactured goods brought $6,715,563,000,
soaring to $7,443,861,000 in the peak
year of 1929.

COUPLE WERE MARRIED A HALF CENTURY AGO

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Wool-ston, Yardley Road, Are Both in Good Health

TO CELEBRATE JULY 4

FALLSINGTON, June 26—Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Woolston, residents of the Yardley Road, near here, are today receiving congratulations of relatives and friends on the 50th anniversary of their wedding day.

No form of celebration was arranged for today, but on Wednesday of next week, the fourth of July, Mr. and Mrs.
Woolston will be feted at the home of their son, Dr. Horace Woolston, Col-lingswood, N. J., at a family gathering.

On the 26th of June, in the year, 1884, the couple were wed in the rectory of an Episcopal Church in Philadelphia, by the Rev. Bronson. They were attended by Dr. and Mrs. Leavitt, Philadelphia. Mrs. Leavitt, the one attendant, is still living.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Woolston are in excellent health, and enjoy the interesting things of these times. They have one son.

Mr. Woolston was born in Penns
Manor, and the birth-place of his bride of 50 years ago was Fallsington. Although they resided for a time in Philadelphia, the couple have spent the greater part of their lives in this vicinity.

MEN'S BIBLE CLASSES ORGANIZE IN COUNTY

Select Norman Kratz to Head Federation Formed at Doylestown

OVER 100 AT MEETING

DOYLESTOWN, June 26—More than 100 men, representing Sunday Schools in at least 21 churches in all parts of the county on Sunday afternoon attended the organization meeting of the Bucks County Federation of Men's Bible Classes, in Salem Reformed Church. The response on the part of the men was excellent and the leaders of the county-wide movement were greatly gratified.

Included among the activities of the afternoon was the election of officers
which resulted as follows: President, Norman C. Kratz, of Pleasantville Reformed Church, Eureka; vice-president, Dr. H. Clayton Moyer, of St.
Stephen's Reformed Church, Perkasia;
secretary, Charles Rempher, Newtown M. E. Church, and treasurer,
C. Leroy Frack, Doylestown Presbyterian Church.

Preceding the meeting which was opened by Paul M. Wack, state regional vice-president for Bucks county, a short recital was rendered by Russell
U. Kramer, organist of St. Stephen's Reformed Church, Perkasia.

After speaking of the purpose of the meeting Mr. Wack placed it in charge of Joseph Montgomery, past national president of the Federation of Men's Bible Classes, who presided throughout the session. Devotionals were in charge of William F. Mann, of Salem Reformed Church, Doylestown, and County Superintendent J. Harry Hoffman, of the Doylestown Presbyterian Church. The singing was directed by John Crouthers, of the Newtown M. E.
Church.

The gathering was disappointed over the fact that because of illness in his family John H. Johnson, president of the Mt. Airy Presbyterian Men's Bible Class, Philadelphia, who was to have delivered the main address of the afternoon, was unable to attend. Representatives of the Philadelphia Federation of Men's Bible Classes, however,
gave several interesting addresses, the longest of which was delivered by James Porter, who spoke on the subject, "Is It Worth While?"

Mr. Montgomery, who talked briefly, spoke of the Bible classes as being the doorways to the church. He reported that Bucks county had been the 21st
in the Commonwealth to affiliate with the State Federation.

Another speaker during the afternoon was Charles Kimmerle, Philadelphia, secretary of the State Federation, who stated that the letters, N. R.
A. might stand for a national religious awakening, which, he said, might be brought about through the organized
Bible classes throughout the country.
He explained that the Federation is non-sectarian and that one of its objectives is to create a greater interest in Sunday school activities.

John Brown, president of the Philadelphia Federation, had charge of the formal organization of the county unit.
After speaking very briefly of the work
he called for a report of the nominating committee submitted by William F. Mann, Doylestown, and following the election of the officers he installed
them.

Announcement was made of the annual convention of the State Federation which will take place in Hazleton
on Saturday, October 13.

The meeting was featured by special music which included a vocal solo, "Open the Gates of the Temple," by Mrs. John Loessel, Newtown, and music by the orchestra of the Newtown M. E. Church. The closing service was in charge of the Rev. Warren
A. Smith, pastor of the Doylestown
M. E. Church.

Communities represented at the meeting were: Chalfont, Perkasia, Newtown, Bristol, Doylestown, Eureka, Blooming Glen, Dublin, Deep Run, Telford, Hartsville, Hilltown, Morrisville, Ivyland, New Britain,
Langhorne and Feasterville.

VISITING HERE

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mettler, White Plains, N. Y.; Mrs. L. H. Mettler and Miss Isabelle Mettler, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.,
are guests of Mrs. Howard Pursell, Radcliffe street.

PRESIDENT BACK AT DESK

Washington, D. C., June 26—The train carrying President Roosevelt and his party from Hyde Park, New York, arrived here at 8.45 a. m., today. The President had not yet finished dressing when the train halted here.

Before next Saturday, President Roosevelt will name two important commissions, one regulating the practices of the New York stock exchange;
the other regulating communications of the nation. In addition to naming the personnel of these two commissions, the President was to set up governmental machinery to administer his Housing program and besides
all these, there was a myriad of matters on which the executive must act
before Saturday. On that day he sails from Annapolis, Maryland, 39 miles from Washington, for his summer vacation Pacific ocean cruise.

FATALITIES INCREASE

Harrisburg, June 26—For the second consecutive month an increase in fatalities and a decrease in industrial injuries was announced today by the

TIE GAME OPENS THE SECOND HALF OF LEAGUE

Hibernians and Independents
Battle To 4 to 4
Deadlock

GAME ENDS IN SIXTH

The Hibernians and the Independents battled to a 4-4 deadlock last night on Leedom's field in the opening game of the second half of the Bristol Twilight League. The game was cal-ed at the end of the sixth because of darkness.

Four runs in the fourth inning did the trick of tying the game for the Hibees. At the time, however, it gave them a one-run lead, only the Indies came back in the fifth and tied the count by scoring a run.

The leader of the attack of the Independents was Dick Seneca, the first-sacker. Dick made three of his team's five hits. He drove in two runs and scored another himself. He opened the rally in the fifth when the Italian club deadlocked the count.

After passing up an opportunity to score in the first, the Indies scored

NO COMPROMISE

Outlaw Dillinger would be willing to surrender provided he was assured he would receive a sentence no more severe than ten years imprisonment.

There is no surprise in this. There is surprise approaching shock, though, in the revelation that Indiana authorities have been seeking to negotiate for the surrender of the notorious killer. The director of the Indiana state safety department admitted that he had promised the outlaw a "square deal" in return for his surrender, the promise being given through Dillinger's father.

A square deal he should have, of course. But a square deal in his case can be nothing less than death. This may have been all that the safety director had in mind. The mere fact, though, that he was seeking to negotiate for the outlaw's surrender implies a willingness on the part of the authorities to offer special terms.

Dillinger may not be guilty of all of the murders laid at his door. There appears to be no doubt, though, that he has committed several killings. He, individually and with his gang, has spread terror through a large section of the country, defying state and federal officers and always ready to shoot himself out of a trap if cornered.

Any thought of compromise with him is abhorrent. He should be brought in dead or alive; and if alive, full and swift justice should be meted out to him. Outlaws of his stripe deserve no mercy.

WATCHING THE NAZIS

A charge that rifles belonging to the New York national guard had been used for drilling purposes by Nazi groups was made the other day before the special House committee investigating foreign propaganda in this country.

It was made in testimony given by Frank Mutschinski, former commander of the German Steel Helmet in New York.

Such a charge, of course, is a serious one, and seems almost too preposterous to be believed.

Major General William N. Haskell, commander of the New York national guard, was prompt to state his belief that Mutschinski's statement "can not be true." He felt confident in his position because "all weapons are carefully secured for the exclusive use of the military service," and "strict regulations to that effect are in force."

This may be true, but the possibility of the regulations being violated is not to be discounted. The charge, at least, would seem to be deserving of investigation instead of being dismissed with an unsupported denial.

The Nazi movement in the United States has not assumed serious proportions, but this doesn't necessarily mean that it will not. Proper precautions need to be taken to see that no laws or military regulations are violated by those active in furthering it.

We don't see where the use of "only" helps much in reporting that the budget deficit is three billion dollars.

Once upon a time a bank's statement showed a man that he had more money than his check stubs indicated. But it did him no good. The shock killed him.

CHAPTER XLII

The mountain woman backed a step toward the rifle that Nance had left leaning against the wall beside the fireplace. Jeff threw up his own weapon with a jeering laugh. "No you don't, Ann Haskel; you just keep a-standin' right what you be. You too, Nance! Jordan, Lem, you git that gun an' put it outside."

While Lem was carrying out his leader's orders John Herbert said, with an air of innocent curiosity: "I'm afraid I don't understand. What is it that you have moved from the head of Shady Creek, Jeff? Do you mind telling me more about it?"

The backwoodsman laughed. "You hear him, boys? He don't understand! An' him with all his book learnin' an' poetry-writin' an' everythin'. Hit's a plum shame what he don't know, ain't hit?"

"Tell him, Jeff. . . . 'He sure ought to know.' . . . 'He might want to do somethin' about hit.'"

Ann Haskel spoke quickly: "You ain't got no call to tell notin', Jeff Todd. Herb he ain't never knowed nothin' 'bout hit an' I'm askin' you fair not to tell him nothin' now."

"Wal, I'm a-tellin' him jest the same," returned Jeff. "Hit's sure time he knowed. You see, comy yer maw she's been a-runnin' a still on her place—in that deep hollow at the head of Shady Creek, hit war. But I figgered as how she'd had we-us a-workin' fer her 'bout long enough, so while she war gone to the city with you-all we-us jest up an' moved the whole doggone business out."

John Herbert met the mountain woman's pleading look with a reassuring smile.

"So that's the way you made the money for my education, was it, mother?"

An expression of glad surprise and pride stole over Ann Haskel's face.

Diane caught her breath with the sudden realization that all the while, as he had already diverted Jeff's attention by leading him to talk of his triumph over Ann, John Herbert had been edging closer to the boasting moonshiner.

The young man spoke now in a tone of mild expostulation which seemed innocently to tickle Jeff's vanity and center his attention even more firmly upon himself and his exploits.

"And you say, Jeff, that while mother has been away you deliberately moved this still off her land?"

"I sure did," the moonshiner returned, grinning with appreciation of his own cleverness. "We-us ain't left a darned thing, nary a drop of hicker, ner a smidgen of mash, ner anything."

"Are you sure, Jeff, that you removed everything? Didn't you leave anything at all of the equipment or machinery, or whatever you call it, so that mother could go on with the business if she wished?"

Jeff Todd's triumph was sweet to his wretched soul. Grinning with delight at John Herbert's innocence, and swelling with the pride of his achievement, he replied: "That thar holler at the head of Shady Creek air as clean as hit war when Gawd-a-mighty first made hit."

Then the last of the Haskels laughed—laughed so heartily that Jeff and his companions consulted one another with looks of wonderment and doubt.

"I'm certainly obliged to you, Jeff," murmured John Herbert politely. "You have been most thoughtful."

"Heh?"

"Why, you see, my mother has decided to retire from all business of that sort and it might have been embarrassing for her if anyone should have happened to find that still on her property. Now that you have done such a thorough job of removing every scrap of evidence that mother was ever interested in it, she will have no cause to worry. Really, you have been too kind."

The moonshiner uttered a savage oath. "I've done fooled with you long enough. You're doggone right that wild-cat maw of yours is goin' to retire. She's a-leavin' these parts 'fore day, jest like I said, an' she's a-takin' you with her. But jest we-us air goin' to give her a whuppin' that she—"

The sentence was never finished. As if the word whipping were a signal, Ann Arbor's former football star went into action. A mighty kick sent Jeff's gun flying across the room. In the same instant a swinging right connecting with the point of the backwoodsman's chin, literally lifted him off his feet. A quick step with the grace of a trained boxer, and a lightning-like left and right effectually put an end to any interference by Jeff's companions before they had recovered from their astonishment.

Calmly John Herbert collected the weapons and placed them for safekeeping in the kitchen.

Jeff Todd rose uncertainly to his feet. While the bewildered leader was collecting his shocked senses his two followers revived enough to sit up.

Diane caught Ann's arm. "We must do something quick," she whispered. "They'll kill him."

"Hush!" returned the mountain woman, calmly. "Thar ain't no call to be scared fer him. Thar ain't no stoppin' a Haskel once he gets started. Them fellers know hit, too. You watch."

With the voice and air of a college professor about to perform a scientific demonstration before his class, John Herbert said: "Now, mother, I suppose I really ought not to permit you and Diane and Nance to witness this, but considering the general understanding of the principles involved I feel that perhaps I am justified in asking your attention. If the spectacle which you are about to witness should prove too revolting, you may retire. I promise you I won't prolong the exhibition unduly."

While John Herbert was addressing the ladies, Jeff and his companions, unfortunately for themselves, drew close together.

The young man faced them.

"Now gentlemen, if you are ready we will proceed."

The three moonshiners, though experienced in the rough-and-tumble style of backwoods combat, had received no training comparable to the rough-and-tumble experiences of the football field. Their tough, stringy muscles, their hit-or-miss tactics, and their utter lack of self-control were all sadly outclassed by the scientifically trained strength, the machine-like precision, and the cool, calculated movements of the all-round university athlete.

Calmly, with seeming deliberation, and apparently little effort, John Herbert proceeded with his demonstration. As he had promised, it did not take long.

Jeff's two comrades were very quickly reduced to trembling, dazed, and bleeding wrecks of their former swaggering selves. The demonstrator took more pains with the masterful spirit of their leader.

With merciless skill and grim satisfaction in the effect of his artistry the last of the Haskels steadily and methodically planted every blow where it would do the most good. When he could prolong Jeff Todd's punishment no longer because the backwoodsman had reached the limit of his endurance, the young man said to the pair in the corner, as if he were addressing two students:

"You boys may go now."

They were sinking gratefully through the door when he halted them.

"Wait. You have forgotten something."

He indicated the battered and bloody thing which lay whimpering on the floor. "Take that along."

Obediently they lifted what had been Jefferson Davis Todd, and with their moaning, half-conscious burden disappeared.

Diane Carroll had hidden her face in her hands. Nance was muttering to herself.

Ann Haskel was about to speak when John Herbert interrupted her.

"And now, mother, perhaps you will be good enough to explain why you ran away? Why are you acting like a criminal?"

"Diane says as how you found the message I got from Mr. Levering," faltered Ann, timidly. "I done left hit fer you on the dresser in your room."

"Yes, but Mr. Levering and Judge Shannon being in town and wanting to see you was no reason for you to act like this."

"You ain't a-thinkin' I war goin' to stay an' be arrested, be you?"

He laughed. "What nonsense!"

"If hit's nonsense to you, I reckon hit's 'cause you don't know," she returned, and was about to explain, when he again checked her.

"Never mind about going over that, mother. I know all about it."

"You know all about me-takin' that money what I hadn't no right to?"

"Yes."

"Do you know?"—the mountain woman hesitated—"do you know about me not bein'—I mean that I ain't—"

Before she could realize what was happening the last of the Haskels had her in his arms.

"I know all about that, too, mother," he said, gently. "Judge Shannon told me the whole story. But you are my mother. You have never been anything else. You can never be anything but mother to me. Please don't ever dare to speak of it again."

When Ann Haskel could find her voice she said, brusquely, "Thar's Diane, son. You ain't fergittin' about her, be you?"

"I know all about Diane too," he answered, with a look toward the girl which, for some reason, caused the blood to rush into her cheeks.

"You ain't goin' to fault Diane, Herb," pleaded Ann. "She done hit all fer we-us— you an' me. If hit didn't turn out like she meant, that war'n' noways her fault. When them thar police take me away I want to know that you an' Diane—"

"Mother! The police are not going to take you anywhere."

"They ain't?"

"Certainly not."

"Why ain't they? I sure done tuck that money. Nance war'n't to blame. I made her do all she did; 'lowed I'd kill her if she didn't do what I said. That thar bank can't hold what I done an' Nance. But me—I sure done hit, an' I reckon I'd have to pay—only I want you an' Diane should—"

"Oh, but, mother, I fixed all that up with Levering and the bank. You fixed hit?"

"Of course. Nobody is going to arrest you for anything."

"Praise the Lawd Gawd-a-mighty!" ejaculated Nance. "I says to myself when I seen you a trimmin' Jeff Todd that our Herb would be a-fixin' everything all right fer we-us."

John Herbert favored Bill Carroll's daughter with a wink which nearly wrecked what was left of that young lady's self-control.

"As for Diane," he said, sternly, "as I was saying when Jeff interrupted us, there is only one thing she can do to get us out of the mess her good intentions got us into."

Diane blushed. "I'll do it gladly, John Herbert."

"What he you aimin' fer Diane to do?" demanded Ann.

"I'm aimin' for her to sell me the Carroll home and marry me in the bargain."

"Be you goin' plam out of your haid, John Herbert! We-us ain't got no money to buy nothin'! Now that I've been ketchin' a-tryin' to git old John Haskel's money away from them furren-missionary folks, we-us air hit poor. An' Diane—Diane's a Carroll. She's quality rich. Sich as her ain't goin' to marry with sich as you. I warn' meannin' that—I war only meannin' fer you to thank her fer what she tried to do fer we-us."

"Oh, yes, she is going to marry with me, mother, cried the last of the Haskels with a confidence which stunned the mountain woman. "I am well aware that Diane is the heiress of the Carroll fortune, but you are overlooking the fact that by the terms of that trust I am the heir of Grandfather John Haskel's estate. You see, mother, you were merely trying to claim a fortune which belonged to your son. The foreign missions never had a chance."

"My Gawd-a-mighty!" shouted Nance.

It was some time later, Ann Haskel and Nance were busy in the kitchen, for all had agreed that it was quite time for something to eat.

Diane and John Herbert were occupied in the living-room with affairs which concerned them mightily.

When the mountain woman appeared in the kitchen doorway just to see that the young people were behaving as they should, John Herbert called to her:

"By the way, mother, what was your idea in leaving one of your party slippers on the dresser in my room?"

"I put Levering's message in hit so's you'd be sure to git hit," Ann answered.

"Was that the only reason?"

"That an'—wal—hit seemed like hit jest natural had to be that a way. Maw Cinderella war bound to leave her slipper somehow, warn't she, to fit in with the story?"

BUY SHEETS PROPER SIZE IN ORDER TO GET GOOD SERVICE

By Rhonda A. Armstrong
Home Economics Representative

Sheets are available in various lengths and widths. The widths are 54, 63, 72, 81 and 90 inches, and the lengths, which mean "corn" lengths, are 90, 99, 108 and 113 inches. These sizes are printed on the labels of ready-made sheets, according to Miss Armstrong.

Prices vary slightly with the sizes. The shorter the sheet the cheaper its price. Many times the homemaker will buy a sheet too short, thinking she is saving a few pennies. This is not always an economy for it means discomfort, undue strain on the sheets, and needless soilage on blankets or quilts.

The standard bed is 76 inches long. That makes a 90-inch sheet seem quite long, but 90 inches means torn length, before hemming. It takes 5 inches of this for the hems and at least 5 inches for shrinkage, which leaves a sheet 80 inches long.

If a sheet is to give service it must not only cover the top of the mattress but it should extend down the thickness of the mattress at both ends and tuck under. Mattresses are about five inches thick. A 6-inch tuck under keeps the sheet smooth and in place on the mattress. A 108-inch length will allow for all of this. For the top sheet there is ample to tuck under the mattress at the foot and enough to turn back over the corners at the head of the bed. As to width one is not so tempted to buy a sheet too narrow. The sheet should be bought according to the width of the mattress plus enough to cover over the sides and tuck in.

Select sheets that are large enough and consider the appearance, feel, weight, closeness of weave, amount of starch contained and the make which from comparative costs seems best.

CORNWELLS PROTEST IS NOT ALLOWED

The second half of the Lower Bucks County Baseball League will open tonight with games being scheduled at Leedom's field, Bristol; Parkland, and Hulmeville. On Leedom's field, Bristol A. A. will entertain the Cornwells A. A. team. The Hibernians go to Hulmeville, while the Odd Fellows travel to Parkland.

Last night at a meeting of the circuit, the managers and directors of the teams were notified that tonight is the final date for the signing of players. The umpires' list consisting of Harry Johnson, Lewis Krause, John Thayer, Edward Kervick, Matt Hutchinson, John Connors and John Elmer, was approved.

Hulmeville A. A. was conceded the first half and a protest by the Cornwells A. A. team was disallowed by President David Landreth.

All games tonight are scheduled to begin at 6:30 o'clock, sharp.

CUBANS WIN OUT AT PRINCETON; 13 TO 7

The Bristol Cubans traveled to Princeton, Saturday, and defeated the fast Colored Elks of that town by a 13-7 score.

It was a closely-fought battle throughout, until the eighth inning, when the Cubans tallied seven times to put the game on ice.

Gibson and Bragg led the locals at bat with four and three hits, respectively, while the fielding of "Cap" Long was outstanding.

On Sunday the Cubans continued their winning streak by defeating the Lumberville A. C., of Lumberville, by a 10-8 score.

After trailing the A. C.'s from the start, the Cubans went into the seventh on the short end of an 8 to 2 score and put on a five-run rally and tied it up in the eighth when Long scored on Gibson's single. They sewed the game up in the ninth when A. Spencer, Daugherty, E. Bragg and W. Long all singled for the winning runs.

On Wednesday night at the Pine street field the Cubans will play the Tullytown F. D. of the Bristol Suburban League.

The Big Green took the lead in the fourth. Riola singled to short. Cooper reached base on Brescia's fumble. McCafferty walked, loading the sacks. Warner forced Riola at the plate. Tullio to Calla. J. Roe socked a double to right, registering Cooper and McCafferty. J. Dougherty singled to left, scoring Warner and Joe Roe, but Roe was called out for being hit with a batted ball. A. Roe doubled to left, counting J. Dougherty. F. Dougherty rolled out.

In the Independents' fifth, J. Seneca singled and went around the bases on hits by H. Seneca and Rubino.

Both Antonelli and Warner were effective in the pinches for their clubs.

Two patrols of the Chalfont No. 1 troop, Scoutmaster Raymond Locke, demonstrated the standard camporee patrol set-up. They were led by Moose Patrol Leader Fred Hellberg who attained 999½ points, and the Flying Eagle Patrol Leader William Angeny whose patrol attained the higher score of 920 points out of a possible thousand. Scouters Gilbert Carlin, George Dornier, O. Kenneth Fretz, Clarence Hawk, Frank Jackson, David Neill, Herbert Pettit, and William L. Schofield, judged the patrols in the thirty-seven camping items under the supervision of Scout Executive William F. Livermore. Owing to the epidemic in Chalfont the first of the month the members of the patrols could not participate in the County Camporee at Bowman's Hill.

Business Men In Great Britain Forget There Was A Depression

pleted, and Britishers are making and selling to Britishers everything physically possible that used to be bought from abroad, the process of expansion may stop.

That is one minor fear. Number one worry however is the loss of foreign trade and consequent "permanent unemployment."

Loss of this trade is variously attributed to the fact that younger nations Britain used to serve have equipped themselves industrially and now supply themselves; to the fact that coal, one time king of British industry, now suffers from the competition of oil and hydroelectric power; to the political events in Russia, China and India which deprived her of once lucrative markets, and to British industrial inefficiency.

Whatever the cause, the loss is there, and though workers from these export industries may be slowly going over the newer industries supplying home consumption, they obviously are not going fast enough to absorb the unemployed.

From the general economic crisis of 1929-1932 Britain is recovering, has in fact almost completely recovered. She has not recovered from the post war loss of her export trade.

Britain is like a man who has chronic dyspepsia and falls sick of the influenza. Recovered from the influenza, the dyspepsia is still there.

To put everybody back to work is the general ambition. Another, less popular standpoint held by some British economists today is that it is better to increase production, increase efficiency, increase the national income, and if necessary go on supporting the surplus unemployed out of the increased profits. Just now Britain is so happy over getting rid of the influenza that she has forgotten the dyspepsia. Sooner or later the old stomach ache will plague her again.

America has had a worse case of flu than Britain ever did. Our pleasant hope is that once rid of the flu there will not even be a stomach ache to mar recovery. That is only a hope, but it is one that ancient Britain scarcely bares to share.

The pilot climb out and jump. A parachute opened. The wind carried him toward Elma. Just as the chute opened and I was watching it, I heard an awful whizzing noise. Something flashed almost right by my eyes. It landed about 15 feet from me with a loud thud. I looked at it. It was part of the motor.

A woman witness told that: "I was attracted by the drone of the motor overhead, and got a pair of field glasses to watch the plane. It was pretty high. I heard an exceptionally loud noise and then the plane seemed to be in trouble. The pilot jumped out and his parachute opened. He drifted toward the southeast, in the direction of Elma, while the plane kept turning over and over, and falling toward Lancaster. A second later we heard a roar in our yard. I ran toward the yard. There was the exhaust pipe of the plane. It had fallen only a few feet from the house. It looked like a great big shiny silver bar."

Still another witness informed that: "We were standing around and talking while waiting for time to go to work. We heard an airplane engine. It seemed to be several thousand feet high. The motor stopped. We looked up. The plane was rolling over and shooting rapidly to earth. It began to nose-dive. Then we saw the pilot bail out. A minute later a parachute opened and he was dangling on the end of it. While the plane was coming down the propeller came off.

Hovgard, who was known to many people in Bristol and vicinity, was formerly connected with the Keystone Aircraft Corporation, here.

HARRISBURG — (INS) — Pennsylvania motorists were called on by the Pennsylvania Motor Federation through its clubs in every county of the state to prepare for a fight against moves it says are already looming and may come before the 1935 session of the Legislature to divert highway funds to other than their intended uses and to increase motor taxes.

dustrial establishments which numbered 778,735 in 1931; 1,014,046 in 1929, and 987,414 in 1927.

The total payroll of the 778,735 workers employed in the state in 1931 amounted to $845,607,000. There were 1,014,046 wage earners in 1929 with a payroll of $1,379,444,000; and 987,414 in 1927 with a payroll of $1,315,993,000.

Pennsylvania exceeded slightly the combined total production outputs of New Mexico, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming, Idaho, Utah, Arizona, Arkansas, Mississippi, Montana, Florida, Colorado, South Carolina, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota and Texas.

Mineral tonnage in the state in 1932 follows:

Anthracite, 49,350,000; bituminous, 76,028,000; iron ore, 102,838; pig iron, 2,069,553. Petroleum production totaled 12,403,000 barrels.

The state's exports of merchandise were valued at $100,435,070 in 1932, a low when compared with $340,843,339 in 1929; $273,647,016 in 1930; and $180,233,538 in 1931.

There are more than 170,000 farms in the state consisting of 15,000,000 acres of land with buildings valued at about $1,200,000. The value of crops, livestock and livestock products marketed in 1930 was $442,356,000 as compared with $497,328,000 in 1929.

Reduced prices make FORD V-8 an even greater value

Prices have been reduced on the Ford V-8, but there has been no change in Ford size or Ford quality. You get more value for your dollar—not a cheaper product.

Same 112-inch wheelbase
Same economical V-8 engine
Same sensational performance
Same roomy body types
Same Ford dependability

Until June 15, prices of the 1934 Ford V-8 remained unchanged. They were not raised this spring. Therefore this is a genuine price reduction.

The Ford dealers want you to know that in every detail the chassis of the regular Ford V-8 is identical to that on which the de luxe bodies are mounted; the difference is in body appointments only. Prices now as low as $505 for the car and $485 for the 131½-inch chassis truck — f. o. b. Detroit. Small down payment. ## King Carl of the Giants

By BURNLEY

DUE to the introduction of the lively ball, all the National League pitchers are less effective than they were last season, and "King Carl" Hubbell, mainstay of the Giants, is no exception in this regard.

Hubbell has been winning his share of games this season, or more than his share, and so far as his winning record is concerned, Carl will probably equal or even excel his 1933 mark. But it is in the earned run averages that the devastating effect of the lively ball is shown.

Hubbell has allowed many more runs in the games he has pitched this year than had been scored off him at a corresponding time last season. The master moundsman of the Giants is running up no such shut-out record as when he amazed the baseball world with his streak of whitewash victories in 1933.

This is no reflection on Carl. It is merely the inevitable result of the new ball, which bounds off the bat with such speed that the infielders are unable to stop many grounders that would have been easy outs if the deadened horsehide were still in use.

Hubbell, despite his rather frail build, is being counted on to win the pennant for the Giants this season almost single-handed. More than any other single member of Bill Terry's outfit, the Giants' flag hopes depend upon the hollow-cheeked Oklahoman with the puzzling screw ball.

"As Hubbell goes, so go the Giants" is a saying that has much more truth than poetry in it.
